Magnolia Beauty Joins Local Pageant's Judges

MISS DRUMSTICKS OF 1956
Joan Miller Dickey of Magnolia

Miss Joan Miller Dickey of Magnolia has joined the board of judges for the Miss Hope and Miss Hospitality Beauty Pageant at the Coliseum at 8 o'clock Saturday night, the Hope Jaycees announced today.

She will serve as a judge along with Miss Tappy Dickens of Magnolia, Miss Carole Ferguson of Texarkana, and two unidentified men.

The 1957 Miss Arkansas, Suzanne Scudder of Hot Springs, originally scheduled as a judge, will however crown the winning contestants. Sixteen girls have entered the contest this year.

Miss Dickey as "Miss Drumsticks" represented the Arkansas Jaycees at the organization's national convention in Kansas City in 1956.

Confession Is Admitted to Trial Evidence

TEXARKANA — The preceding television murder trial of James Moore, 19-year-old Miller County Negro, moved into its second day this morning with a confession by the defendant admitted as evidence.

For the first time in Arkansas history, television cameras were trained on proceedings in a court when the first degree murder trial opened yesterday.

Circuit Judge Lyle Brown allowed cameras men of Texarkana Station KCOM-TV to shoot trial scenes through a "one-way" window which appeared as a mirror to those in the court room. Microphones picked up sound for radio and television broadcasts.

All of the proceedings will be filmed.

Moore is standing trial for the second time in the 1956 robbery slaying of Mr. R. Hamm, 78, of Miller County.

The defendant and three other young Negroes were sentenced to death together after an earlier trial but the Arkansas Supreme Court set aside the convictions.

Moore's current trial is the first of these.

After an all-white, all-male jury was picked yesterday, Prosecutor Travis Mathis sought to introduce

Aga Khan, 74, Moslem Sect Leader, Dies

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — The Aga Khan III, a wealthy potentate to whom 20 million Moslems paid spiritual homage, died today. He was 74.

A glamorous figure on the international scene for many years, the Aga Khan succumbed to a sudden weakening of the heart during the night. He had been suffering from heart disease since 1952.

He was known as a sportsman with an ardent interest in race horses, a devotee of luxurious living, and a man with an eye for a beautiful woman. But he was also interested in affairs of state — and once served as president of the League of Nations.

He once expressed his love of material pleasures in these words: "Have fun, it's late than you think."

But of his devotion to his Moslem faith: "Each Friday, like every good Moslem, I spend an hour in meditation and prayer. That is my most beautiful hours."

Prince Aly Khan, 46, has generally been regarded as the heir-apparent, but somebody recently expressed as to whether he or Prince Sadruddin, 24, the Aga's Harvard-educated younger son, would be named. The Aga was said to have been disturbed about Aly's playboy activities. Aly is the former husband of Hollywood actress Rita Hayworth.

Ft. Smith Police Ask Higher Pay

FORT SMITH, (UPI) — The Municipal Police Association has filed a resolution with the city council, declaring the police force here is underpaid and undermanned in comparison with the national average.

The resolution filed yesterday, said Fort Smith needs 37 more policemen and asserts that salaries are $82 monthly under average.

Half a Dozen Mentioned for Governorship

By ADREN COOPER

LITTLE ROCK — About half a dozen Arkansas men, each faced with a tough decision, are avidly watching the antics of the defending champ these days, wondering if he is flexing his muscles for a purpose, or just for practice. The decision: To run, or not to run, for governor.

The next political campaign is a year away and Gov. Orval Faubus is not officially running for anything but no one will deny that he is "on the go" speech-making and hand-shaking at various public functions in all parts of the state have become almost a daily routine.

A half-dozen or so potential challengers undoubtedly consider Faubus the key to the 1958 nomination: He might scare some of them away; others might consider him weak candidate because of his third term tradition and his program of higher taxes. Even Chris Flintholmer, the only avowed candidate, left the way open for a strategic retreat by commenting that he was "just sitting around a table talking to friends" when he announced that he "definitely" would be a candidate.

The political insiders list, besides Flintholmer, these likely candidates:

Atty. Gen. Bruce Bennett, State Sen. James (Doc) Baker of West Helena, former judge Lee Ward of Paragould, State Sen. Marvin Mellon of Jonesboro, and possibly former Gov. Ben Laney of Jefferson County and former State Sen. Jim Johnson of Crossett. All of them have publicly rejected the idea — with varying degrees of emphasis.

Even without the many reports of Bennett's intentions, he would have to be considered in any political speculation since the job of attorney general is considered a stepping stone to the governor's chair. This is still a political axiom even though many — including the last two, Jack Holt and Ike Murry — failed to make it. Bennett, former prosecuting attorney at El Dorado, with his present job by a large majority in 1956.

Bennett may believe that he needs to spend more time in his present job before trying for a promotion. However, if a new governor is elected next year, Bennett might have to wait until 1962 since Arkansas voters have a habit of granting most governors a second term.

So far, Bennett has not been forced to issue any opinions that would bruise any important political toes.

Baker and Mellon seem to fall into the same category: Both have pushed a great deal of legislation through the State Senate without getting into very many bitter wrangles. Mellon created a major controversy with water rights bill in 1955 and another in 1955 with a bill establishing the Arkansas Motor Vehicle Commission.

A watered-down water bill was passed over loud but minor opposition this year. The motor vehicle commission, which replaced a 1955 law that was declared unconstitutional, squeaked through on the second try. The Jonesboro senator is best known for those two items, but he also has sponsored many bills which were more popular if less publicized. Mellon once remarked that the Senate had never failed to pass any of his bills which actually came to a vote (although some of them were rejected by the House).

Baker was one of the early champions of the popular industrial development program and introduced most of the major follow-up legislation on industrial development this year.

Ward did not get into the runoff in the race for chief justice of the Supreme Court last year, but reports indicate that he was pleasantly surprised at the mail received.

4-Year-Old Girl Dies of Burns

JONESBORO, (UPI) — A 4-year-old girl died in a hospital here last night from burns received yesterday afternoon in a fire at her home.

The victim was Linda Sue Parikh, who lived with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Murray. An oil stove exploded while Linda was asleep and her grandmother had gone to a nearby store.

A service station employee across the street, Leon Stout, ran into the flaming house and brought out the critically injured girl.

INSULT TO INJURY

JERSEY CITY, N. J. (UPI) — Mrs. Thomas E. Smith won a divorce yesterday because her husband added insult to injury.

Besides beating her up, Mrs. Smith said, her husband forced her to sleep with his grandmother and turned her paycheck to his mother.

Helena Bridge Affected in Crisis

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — A temporary financial crisis which the Arkansas Highway Commission discussed at a meeting yesterday will not affect the proposed Mississippi River bridge at Helena, Highway Director Herbert Eldridge said today.

Plans for the bridge are still under study by the Bureau of Public Roads.

The commission is committed to advertise for bids as soon as BPR approval is obtained. Financing details will be worked out after cost of the structure is determined.

The commission yesterday authorized execution of a contract with Stiles, Nicolaus, Co., St. Louis, to sell revenue bonds which will be issued to help finance the bridge.

Khrushchev in Blast at Ike's 'Clean H-Bomb'

By HENRY SHAPIRO

PRAGUE, (UPI) — Soviet Communist Party Chief Nikita Khrushchev attacked President Eisenhower today for speaking "stupidities" about a "clean" H-bomb.

In opposing this motion, Sen. Russell (D-Ga.) and other Southerners have contended the House bill would permit the attorney general — backed by troops, if necessary — to move into the South to enforce school integration and racial desegregation in public places.

Russell told reporters that as a result of the Southerners' attack on the terms of what he calls a "violent" measure, he announced the bill as it now stands is mounting.

"How can there be clean bombs for dirty things?" he asked.

Khrushchev also hinted that he will meet again soon with Yugoslavia's President Tito, one of the leaders of the policy of "independent socialism" free from Moscow control.

The burly Khrushchev, in an off-the-cuff speech at the "Stalin grad" metal works here during the current visit to Czechoslovakia by him and Soviet Premier Nikolai Bulganin, also promised the Soviet bloc outside Russia that "we won't criticize you if you don't criticize us."

On the H-bomb, he was critical of President Eisenhower's statement last week that American scientist hope to perfect an H-bomb free from radioactive fallout dangers.

"Eisenhower is a man of principle," and later it was noted that OKEAN, Ark. (UPI) — The spreading national strike of cement workers apparently will have no effect on union workers at the Ideal Cement Co. plant here.

Taylor said, however, that this ruling did not mean that the defense would get all the FBI documents in the Clinton segregation cases.

The defense demanded the oral statement summary, having obtained yesterday Crossno's signed statement which was in FBI files.

At that time, the oral summary given to FBI was kept by Taylor.

Chief defense spokesman Robert L. Dobbs, Memphis, demanded that the administration compile the FBI report by the end of October.

3 of Russia's Top Men Face Life of Exile

By DANIEL F. GILMORE

LONDON, (UPI) — A Communist correspondent in Moscow reported that Georgi Malenkov's accomplices will join him in virtual exile — Vyacheslav Molotov as a foreign ministry "political expert" and Lazar Kaganovich as a factory manager.

Molotov would get a mental job under his own student and former deputy, Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, according to the authoritative report published in the Danish Communist party organ "Land of Volk."

It said Dmitri Shepikov, ousted from the Communist party secretariat as a lesser "anti-party" figure, would become a professor.

Earlier, London observers said Malenkov's exile to head a remote power station about 2,000 miles from Moscow had saved him and the rest of the group which had opposed Soviet Communist party chief Nikita Khrushchev from a firing squad.

In reporting what happened to the others of the ousted group the Danish newspaper published in Copenhagen carried the news on its front page. It said it came from "our own correspondent in Moscow."

Civil Rights' Backers Reduce Scope of Bill

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON — Sponsors moved today toward narrowing the enforcement provisions of the Eisenhower administration's civil rights bill to the single field of protecting Negro and minority voting rights.

Sen. Francis Case (R-S.D.) disclosed he is drafting such an amendment. Senators Clifford Case (R-N.J.) and Kuehne (R-Calif.)

said in separate interviews they support the principle of converting the House-passed bill into strictly a voting-rights measure.

Leaders called the Senate into session early to resume debate on a motion of Sen. Knowland of California, GOP floor leader, to bring the House measure before the Senate for action.

In opposing this motion, Sen. Russell (D-Ga.) and other Southerners have contended the House bill would permit the attorney general — backed by troops, if necessary — to move into the South to enforce school integration and racial desegregation in public places.

Russell told reporters that as a result of the Southerners' attack on the terms of what he calls a "violent" measure, he announced the bill as it now stands is mounting.

"How can there be clean bombs for dirty things?" he asked.

Khrushchev also hinted that he will meet again soon with Yugoslavia's President Tito, one of the leaders of the policy of "independent socialism" free from Moscow control.

One of these developments was Russell's conference yesterday with President Eisenhower. The Georgia senator evidently brought new hope that the administration itself will move toward a compromise.

Sen. Mansfield of Montana, assistant Democratic leader, agreed with Russell's view that the Senate will not accept the House bill without changes.

"A civil rights bill will be passed, but not in the form in which it is pending now," he predicted.

The apparent trend toward compromise brought from Rep. Collier (D-N.Y.) a statement that "these seem to be no fight in the administration."

Collier, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and a strong advocate of the administration's proposed House bill, said, "The President bends with every wind."

Eisenhower has said his objective is to insure the voting rights of all citizens. He has expressed surprise at the interpretation Russell gave to the bill.

Road Builders May Have to Wait on Cash

The Arkansas Highway Commission has sent the following announcement to The Star:

In HEMPSTEAD COUNTY, the following roads are hereby designated as a part of the State Secondary Highway System:

1. From State Highway 29 south of Evening Shade east through Patmos, a distance of approximately 4½ miles.

2. From State Highway 4 approximately 1.5 miles southeast of U. S. Highway 67 in Hope through Shover Springs to the Nevada County Line, a distance of approximately 7.4 miles.

Subject to the following conditions:

1. All required right-of-way free of obstructions will be furnished free of cost to the state within 90 days.

2. System approval by the Bureau of Public Roads.

3. State maintenance of the roads will begin when the needed work is accomplished by the state to bring the roads to a satisfactory condition for maintenance.

The plant, which employs some 180 workers, is the only one of its kind in Arkansas although a new plant is planned at Foreman, another southwest Arkansas town not far from here by the Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co. The plant here is one of 48 such facilities operated by the ideal company, which has headquarters

Lindbergh's Story Fails as a Movie

B. BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD — Many of Hollywood's top producers around they are baffled by public tastes.

"You just can't tell what they're going for these days," one of them said recently. "In the old days, when you had a good picture with star names and production value, you knew you were going to make money. Nowadays, even the good pictures can fail on their own. You just can't tell."

Take "Spirit of St. Louis" as an example. Studios had been after Lindbergh's story ever since he flew the Atlantic. Warners allowed six million dollars to be sunk in production and the presence of James Stewart was believed to be box office insurance.

It drew excellent reviews, but not enough business.

Warner Brothers faces a heavy loss. Pictures are supposed to earn double their shooting cost before they turn a profit. "Spirit of St. Louis" will fall far short of that.

Why? Here's how one veteran star analyzed "Spirit":

"They waited too long to make the picture. Your biggest market today is with the kids. A guy flying the Atlantic alone in a little biplane makes no impression on them. They know that jets can cross the ocean in a few hours today."

Among the biggest crosses of all time are such films as "The Robe," "The Ten Commandments," "Samson and Delilah," "Quo Vadis" and "David and Bathsheba."

But customers and five-million-dollar budgets are no guarantee of success. "Haen of Troy" and "Alexander the Great," two expensive epics, failed with audiences.

One of the biggest hits of 1957, however, is "Gunfight At O. K. Corral."

One studio head commented on it to me:

"The picture is a collection of all the clichés in western pictures. The characters — Wyatt Earp and Doc Holliday — can be seen on television every night of the week. Yet it's a big hit. How do you figure it?"

You can. You just go on making pictures and hope that somehow the great unknown — the movie audience — will be attracted to the theaters.

Sullivan and Allen Won't Risk Vacation

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP) — This is to be a piece about Steve Allen and Ed Sullivan, but first I want to explain that I didn't catch much of their programs Sunday evening. I was over at ABC-TV watching Gary Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks Jr. in a 1939 movie, "Gunga Din." I'd like to write a piece about it too, but there isn't much to say except that it has the jingle-jangle and bang-bang and Hairbreadth Harry escapades that appeal to adolescent males of all ages.

While watching and listening to "Gunga Din" on one set I had the other set switching between Sullivan and Allen without the sound track on. Cutting my eyes to the silent set occasionally, I noticed something interesting.

Steve Allen and Ed Sullivan are two of the tiredest looking men I've seen in this hot summer. Both need long vacations. But reliable sources say that neither thinks he dares take a vacation for fear the other will capture the entire audience.

It's an unhappy state of affairs and it couldn't happen to two nicer guys. There have been many reports about their taking personal cracks at each other, but in talking with each of them at various times I've heard only pleasanties about the other.

In an excellent interview with Mike Wallace on ABC-TV Sunday,

News Briefs

WASHINGTON — A proposed $11,516,000 appropriation for the Blytheville Air Force Base was included in the 1½ billion dollar military works authorization bill approved yesterday by the House. The Blytheville work was described as including operational and training maintenance, supply and community facilities, troop housing and land acquisition.

WASHINGTON — The Community Facilities Administration yesterday approved a $105,000 loan to Delight, a town of 700 in Pike County, Ark., for construction of a waterworks system. Delight present source of water consists of shallow wells.

MEMPHIS (UPI) — A notice of appeal to the Arkansas Supreme Court from a Pulaski Circuit Court ruling was filed yesterday by attorneys representing Dr. Francis Bremer. The high court would be asked to reverse Judge J. Mitchell Cookville's decision upholding Dr. Bremer's dismissal in 1956 by head of the State Welfare Department's Crippled Children's Division.

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — The city Library Commission yesterday abandoned efforts to market $1.250,000 in library construction bonds at a maximum 3 per cent interest. The commission voted instead to ask the City Council to submit to the voters a proposal rate ceiling.

which would not set an interest

State-Wide Crop Report Optimistic

LITTLE ROCK (UPI) — Most crops in Arkansas are growing well, the state-federal Crop Reporting Service said today.

Rice crops in east Arkansas need cultivation in grassy fields, the weekly report said, and recent rains have interfered with field work in the area.

The Reporting Service gave this picture:

Late corn, sorghum and soybeans still are being planted.

Late cotton planting appears to have started well. Damage to this year's crop has been light so far. A large tonnage of hay was baled last week.

The harvest of Elberta peaches soon will begin in the Nashville and Crowley Ridge areas. Volume and price prospects look good.

The rice crop continues satisfactory growth although grass is a problem in many fields.

Allen demonstrated to my mind an interesting consistency. The opinions he expressed to Wallace were in general the same that he expressed to me in an interview several months ago. He's cool about this so-called war; he believes he can earn a living in many more besides knocking himself out on a Sunday evening TV program. Aside from being nice guys and looking tired, Allen and Sullivan have little in common temporally. Onnithologically speaking, Allen looks like a contented owl while Sullivan reminds you of a hungry jay fighting for a piece of meat. The analogy is deceptive in light of the facts, however: Allen has beaten Sullivan's rating only five times and so Sullivan should feel at ease. It shows how misleading a simple can be.

The big problem, as Allen hinted to Wallace, is to obtain ghosts who appeal to the widest possible audience. For it seems that a large segment of the viewing audience is conditioned to watching a variety show on Sunday evenings. There seems to be lots of room for two variety shows. There also is plenty room for movies like "Gunga Din."

DOROTHY DIX

Girl Scared to Drop Her No-Good Fiancé

Dear Dorothy Dix: My daughter has been engaged for five years to a man who is no good. She has tried to break off with him, but he threatens to kill himself or turn to drink. I think she is in love with him.

He talks a lot about his "promising" future, but can't hold a job. He has visions of owning expensive homes, imported cars, custom-made clothes, and boorish carfare from my daughter. How can we convince her to break the engagement? — O. T.

Dear O. T.: I agree that the man is slow poison for your daughter, but convincing her of this is another matter. If five years of this four-flusher hasn't taught her anything, she's slow to learn.

Pin your hopes on the man.

Clearly he's not anxious to marry your daughter, or he would have done so before this.

You can give your daughter assurance that she need not feel sorry for him. If by some remote chance, he should carry out his threats, he'd prove only what you and I suspect — that he's a bit unbalanced.

Prayer can succeed where words fail.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I'm a widow passed over loud but minor opposition this year. The motor vehicle commission, which replaced a 1955 law that was declared unconstitutional squeaked through on the second try. The Jonesboro senator is best known for those two items, but he also has sponsored many other bills which were more popular if less publicized. Melton once remarked that the Senate had never failed to pass any of his bills which actually came to a vote (although some of them were rejected by the House).

Baker was one of the early champions of the popular industrial development program and introduced most of the major followup legislation on industrial development this year.

Ward did not get into the runoff in the race for chief Justice of the Supreme Court last year, but reports indicate that he was pleasantly surprised at the mail response he received from a comparatively few television appearances and newspaper advertisements.

The plans of Johnson, who made an unsuccessful try for attorney general and then failed again as a gubernatorial candidate last year, and former governor Laney apparently are linked to the segregation issue.

Laney, a former Camden businessman, insists that he wants to remain on his farm near Althiemer, a few miles east of Pine Bluff, but he has made a few speeches at White Citizens Council meetings. While governor, he was noted for his conservative, pay-as-you-go policy.

Johnson and Laney undoubtedly would run on a segregation platform—as Johnson did last year. With racial integration in schools spreading to Little Rock and other population centers, either, or both, men might consider the issue more important than in 1956.

It is interesting to note that most of the rumors involve potential candidates from the east and south. For instance, Baker, Ward and Melton all live in east Arkansas—and one or two may be called out.

One "mountain" man who should be mentioned is Clifton (Deacon) Wade, the dignified, soft-spoken state senator from Fayetteville. He was the most effective leader in a successful fight for a bill which permitted rural electric co-operative to operate inside cities and towns.

It is not inconceivable that Faubus will revert to his 1954 strategy: Waiting until the last possible minute before announcing a decision. This might narrow the field somewhat and prevent a split of the vote into neat little sections. Rumors persist that instead of trying to become the first third-term governor in modern Arkansas history, Faubus will try for the congressional seat now held by Rep. Jim Trimble of Berryville.

Finkheimer, the Little Rock meat packer, and some of the other would-be governors may consider the race wide open regardless of Faubus' plans. The new state income tax law, which reaches the middle class wage earner as well as the wealthy, may generate more political heat than the new 3 per cent sales tax. The income tax must be paid in a lump sum—and the deadline in some towns a month before election. The candidates may take the position that he sales tax is not an issue since the voters will get a chance to have their say on it in November of next year.

Faubus will have to convince the voters that his sales income and severance tax programs—pushed through the legislature at his insistence—has paid off in needed benefits.

On the other hand, the governor will have a hard core of support from such groups as teachers and welfare recipients who derive direct benefits from the tax program.

The political railbirds say that a candidate must have the support of at least three of the five or six so-called special interest groups, such as the two mentioned above; the rural electric cooperatives; the chambers of commerce; and labor—provided there is an issue great lands beyond the Great Smoky Mountains.

Aged at lack of what he considered proper military support in these campaigns from the North Carolina legislature, Sevier joined the settlers in a revolt to set up the State of Franklin. He became its first governor.

This colorful experiment in pioneer self-rule lasted from 1785 to 1788, when the State of Franklin collapsed in a state of chaos.

Sevier was charged with treason by North Carolina, but later served in its legislature, the national Congress, and became the first governor of Tennessee, when it was admitted to the Union as the 16th state. He engaged in a bitter personal feud with Andrew Jackson, and died in 1815 at the age of 70.

While it lasted, the short-lived State of Franklin fought hard to preserve its dignity as a legal body.

The courts, under Sevier, dealt stern justice.

Here is the ruling against a man convicted as a horse thief:

"It is therefore ordered that the said Elias Pyburne be confined in the publick pillory one hour; that he have both his ears nailed to the pillory and severed from his head; that he receive at the publick whipping post 30 lashes

Garde stood still at the door; the room was a small and pleasant one, its walls book-lined, the tall windows shuttered from without. There was a small marble fireplace, now filled with a spread fan of gold-colored paper. The carpet was green and worn. The rector's desk and leather chair filled most of the floor space. Nan sat on a leather couch. There was one other chair.

Garde came into the room only far enough to close the door behind him. "It is very important, sir," he said gravely, standing tall and strong against the dark wood. Nan watched him closely, her hands still holding her pencil and tablet.

Garde told them briefly of the immediate events. "It has to do with Kurt," he said at once. "Last night some new evidence was — dug up. Literally. A bag which the old doctor had enlisted to Valley to keep it away from the police — she had buried it under the hedge. Then, last night, for her own reasons — she dug it up and showed it to me. This morning we took it to Mr. Peredo and then to the county court. I truly believe that now we know the truth of what happened on the night of Ben Laurent's death."

Nan's red-lined tablet slid to the floor with a soft rustle of its pages. Garde looked sharply at her: she was dead-white, and he went swiftly to her side, sat down and took her chilled hands in his, massaged them gently with his warm fingers. She drew a shuddering breath, then leaned against his arm and soon quieted. But he continued to hold her hands — it seemed right for them to be sitting so, and in spite of the things to be discussed, happiness enfolded them. Garde knew that happiness as right, and complete; he knew that Nan so recognized it.

Mr. Stanfield sat back in his big leather chair to listen; he held his fingertips neatly together; sometimes the palms of his hands were flat upon each other; sometimes the stretched widely apart, the fingers still touching. His mouth was pursed occasionally; his eyes were always thoughtful.

"The things which were in the bag which Dr. Tom gave to Valley," said Grade, "were of such a nature that I feel we can now reconstruct accurately the events of that night of almost a year ago.

"On that night, it was a Tuesday — the day after Labor Day. Nan here was at home suffering from a cold and reaction from the fight which had taken place down on the sly several nights before. She also was suffering from her knowledge that she must soon go through another painful scene with the man whom she was engaged."

He glanced at Nan, who nodded. He spoke then directly to Mr. Stanfield. "As a stranger coming into this group of people involved in the tragedy, sir, I have been able to think about the events, and the details, from a somewhat fresh approach. For instance, it had occurred to me that young Laurent might have been blackmailing the old doctor over that car incident which happened five years ago. Kurt had foolishly sought to protect the lad personally — the old doctor wanted the matter hushed up — and so Ben was able to sell his promise.

"From a note," Garde continued "and a check found in the medical kit unburied last night, it seems likely that the old doctor had decided not to go on as he had been with Ben constantly being threatened, and having to pay the boy off. He probably told him as much when they got together down on the pier."

"From what I have learned of Ben's character, the boy probably brandished a gun and threatened the old man who stood holding the little, opened bag which contained the note and the check. He might have been in the act of throwing these papers out of the bag when Ben came toward him. In what could have been a reflex act of self-protection, he seized a small knife which was among some other instruments in the bag. A scuffle followed in which the gun went off harmlessly, and the knife blade pierced Ben's throat."

"Ben yelled — just about the time Kurt's headlights turned into the club grounds. Certainly in panic, the old man snatched up his bag, picked up the gun and dropped it into the kit; he couldn't find the knife — maybe he decided it had fallen into the water — and he scuttled up the hill, anxious not to meet whoever it was who had just arrived at the club. I don't think he thought about its being Kurt. He should have, but have prevented any logical thinking. His only thought was to get to his car — wherever he had left it in Copland's drive, maybe — and go home."

"He was dreadfully troubled, of course, by what had happened, but his first concern, I believe, was for propriety that I understand he was, was to keep the Lillard name out of the affair. So he went home, determined to keep still about the matter, not to talk about it unless he had to. For Nan's sake — and of course Kurt's."

Nan's head slowly lifted. "But —" she breathed.

Garde nodded. "Yes, when Kurt was indicted for murder, I think

State Makes Certain Profit on Welfare

Hope Star
State Capital Bureau

Little Rock, July 9 (Special). A cash profit is made by the State Welfare Department from many — it would take an analysis to determine how many — of the 53,000 old age assistance recipients on the rolls in Arkansas.

If the welfare client, because of or she has other income, is entitled to a monthly check of $8 (this amount is used to illustrate the point), the state actually receives $13 from the federal government and pockets $5 of that sum.

This is due to a Washington-prescribed formula under which, in ascertaining the amount collectible from the federal government, the amount collectible from the federal government, the amount of the old check to which a person is entitled is divided by 2 and to the result $8 is added. In the case of an $8 recipient, division by two would give $4 as a result; $8 added makes $13 due from the federal government.

Up to $30, the federal aid is $24; above $30, the federal and state allotments are usual.

Not from new sales tax revenues, as some published reports have indicated, but simply because of increased appropriations and allocations of General Revenues (annually it is only $1,000,000 more than the pre-1953 allotment), it was possible to raise the average old age assistance payment to a record $42.00 July 1. The June 1 average was $35.49.

A total of 53,801 persons received old age assistance, which totaled $2,813,307; 21,885 children were helped with $415,451; $209,465 went to 6,655 permanently and totally disabled; $93,893 to 1,980 blind persons, $1,562 as Confederate old age assistance to 41 and $1,320 to Confederacy pensions to 44. In the dependent children category, 6,167 adults collected welfare aid.

The total number of beneficiaries was 89,842 not including 39 for whom nursing care costing $2,748 was provided, and 655 age cases with nursing care costing $45,912.

The year 1816 was such a cold year throughout the world that it was known as "the year without a summer."

Dr. Tom may have told him some of what had happened. Perhaps he didn't mention the bag which he had given to Valley. But he did tell Mr. Peredo that he could testify."

29 to Appear in 1st Baptist Pop Concert

Twenty-nine young people, ages 15-20 years, from the First Baptist Church will present their Sixth Annual Pop Concert at 8 p. m. Friday, July 12, in the air-conditioned church auditorium. The group is composed largely of high school students with several college students.

Misses Sue Moses and Ann Sutton will be soloists for the evening, and Miss Charlene Horton will serve as the accompanist. The choir is composed of the following:

The group will sing selections from the Broadway musical, "The King and I," "Dry Bones," "One World," "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and other numbers of interest to the general public.

The public is invited to attend. There is no admission.

Final agreement was reached on relocation of the proposed Little Rock expressway to a point to the east of MacArthur Park and the old University Hospital property.

It is planned to use the hospital property for a new University of Arkansas Graduate Institute of Technology, Little Rock, and university interests had sought the relocation.

The commission decided that overwide trailers could be towed on state highways if certain regulations are obeyed. These stipulations include movement under special permits and over specified routes during daylight hours Monday through Friday, and towing by trucks of at least three-fourths of a ton in capacity or larger.

Also, carriers must be licensed and bonded and must provide a flagman or pilot car.

Apparently this decision closed a controversy about moving the overwide trailers.

self and others have placed on the bill's powers.

Francis Case, one of the measure's sponsors, said the amendment he is drafting would link the bill's enforcement provisions to the 15th Amendment to the Constitution. That provision says the right to vote shall not be abridged because of race, color or previous condition of service.

"I think the Senate could well go as far as to provide for implementation of the 15th Amendment," Case said. "There are some members who believe we should carry out the constitutional prohibition against discrimination in voting who would hesitate to authorize the attorney general to investigate and act on complaints in the entire field of civil rights."

One provision of the House bill would authorize the attorney general to seek injunctions to restrain violations or threatened violation of civil rights. Violators of these injunctions could be punished for contempt without jury trial.

Francis Case indicated he thinks a jury trial amendment will be written into the bill. Sen. O'Mahoney (D-Wyo), author of such a proposal, said he couldn't believe the Senate will pass the measure "unless it contains my amendment or a reasonable facsimile thereof."

Clifford Case, another sponsor of the bill, said he will oppose the amendment because he regards it as a device "to make it possible to disobey the law."

But he said he is willing to consider changes which would "clearly and sharply confine the bill to enforcement of the voting rights of all citizens."

Kuchel said he would be willing to vote for a proposal to tie the bill to the 15th Amendment to the Constitution, as Francis Case suggested.

Even if this change were made, Southerners indicated they will still make an all-out effort to talk the bill to death, although they gave some signs they may permit a vote by the middle of next week on Knowland's motion to take up the measure.

Meanwhile, the Southerners continue to pound away on the theme that the measure would give what Sen. Oliver D. Johnston (D-SC) called "Hitler-like" powers to the attorney general.

Announcing that he would have no part in any compromises, Johnston told the Senate yesterday that if the bill is passed it will set race relations in the South "back more than 100 years and bring out bloodshed."

Johnston said that as far as he is concerned, he thinks every American ought to have the right to vote. But he said the states

Speaking extemporaneously before thousands of Czechs, he accused the ousted group of Soviet leaders led by Vyacheslav Motovilov of opposing closer relations with Yugoslavia, among other things.

Then Krushchek turned to Yugoslav newsmen covering the speech and said: "Don't write this because I shall tell comrade Tito myself at the first opportunity."

He did not say when that opportunity would come, but he and Bulganin visited the Yugoslav leader last year to patch up differences which began when Tito was kicked out of the Cominform while Motovilov still was riding high in the Soviet hierarchy.

Court Finds No

June 18 that the government had no legal right to turn Girard over to a Japanese court for trial because his alleged offense was committed on duty. District Judge Joseph C. McGarragh ordered Girard given an Army court martial.

The Supreme Court reversed McGarragh's basic ruling, but affirmed his denial of a writ of habeas corpus which would have forced the government to bring Girard home out of reach of Japanese prosecution.

The opinion further noted that Japan's cession to the U.S. of jurisdiction to try American military personnel for conduct which violates the law of both countries was conditioned by an agreement. This agreement "gives authority of the state having primary jurisdiction 'shall give sympathetic consideration on a request from the authority of the other state for a waiver of its rights in cases where the other state considers such waiver to be of particular importance.'

This was the provision under which the U.S. government agreed to turn over Girard to Japan. And this was the particular provision to which the court found no constitutional or legislative barrier.

The heart of the court's far-reaching ruling was in these words:

"The issue for our decision is therefore narrowed to the question whether upon the record before us, the Constitution or legislation subsequent of the security treaty prohibited the carrying out of this provision authorized by the treaty for waiver of the qualified jurisdiction granted by Japan. We find no constitutional or statutory barrier to the provision as applied here. In the absence of such encroachment, the wisdom of the arrangement is exclusively for the determination of the executive and legislative branches."

"The judgment of the district court in No. 1108 is reversed and its judgment in No. 1108 is affirmed."

Pulaski Uses July Hospital Quota by 8th

LITTLE ROCK — Little Rock, North Little Rock and Pulaski County used up their monthly patient quotas at the University of Arkansas Medical Center here in the first eight days of July, according to an estimate by a center official.

As a result, they will have to pay for care of their indigent patients during the rest of the month.

John W. Gerdes, assistant administrator, said yesterday he made the estimate on the basis of admissions counted against the three local governments through July 4.

Mayor Woodrow Mann of Little Rock said, "This doesn't sound right without federal intervention."

Crow Suggests Trade School Is Opportunity

Editor The Star: In your very fine paper I recently read an article pertaining to Act Numbered 228 of the 1957 Arkansas General Assembly wherein provision is made for the establishment of a Vocational-Technical School in each congressional district. I recall that many of our colleges and universities had such a beginning and I can visualize the beginning of a great institution under the provisions of this act, in each congressional district.

I offer my services to any interested group that would like to give a push toward getting a vocational school established in a congressional district.

It appears to me that we are passing up an opportunity if we do not exert every effort possible to persuade the state to establish this school in our area.

Yours very truly,
F. C. CROW

Willisville Is Holloway Reunion Site

The Holloway Reunion, organized last July, will meet Sunday, July 14, on the lawn of the E. L. Holloway home in Willisville, according to an announcement received here. Ollis Holloway, Texarkana, is president of the family group, and Mrs. Ellis Whitten, El Dorado, is secretary.

Invitations have gone out to the descendants of the late R. W. T. Holloway, who came to Arkansas from Georgia in 1882, settling at Rosston, but later moving to Willisville. Of his eleven children growing to adulthood, seven are still living. They are:

Henry Holloway, Little Rock; Mrs. Lela Marble, Houston, Texas; Ed Holloway, Willisville; Mrs. Lula Paul, Dallas, Texas; Mrs. Effie Cook, Newnan, Georgia; Warren Holloway, Willisville; and Mrs. Ruth Phillips, Lewisville, Texas.

A general invitation is likewise

REALISM
FARMINGDALE, N.J. (UPI) -- State Police said yesterday that realism was carried a bit too far at nearby Cowboy City, a re-created old West town where bank hold-ups and train robberies are staged for tourists.

Detectives said thieves weren't acting when they broke into kiddyland and looted safes of $5,800.

Commenting upon the heavy silt that flows in its waters, old-timers used to say that the Colorado River is "too thick to drink and too thin to plow."

being extended to all old-time friends of the family to "drop by to visit" sometime during the day. A basket luncheon will be served at noon.
